Mission	The South Bay Coalition to End Human Trafficking upholds a victim-centered approach in its efforts to coordinate resources and strengthen local capacity to respond to trafficking victims and their needs.
Collaborative Membership	The SBCEHT consists of over 30 government and non-governmental organizations in the South Bay. See website for full listing.
Purpose	The South Bay Coalition to End Human Trafficking aims to better address the trafficking concerns in the area and to foster and strengthen collaboration and participation among those living in the San Francisco South Bay region through the following activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Bring visibility to and increase awareness of human trafficking</li> <li>• Identify and secure human and monetary resources for organizations that serve trafficking survivors and the work of the Coalition</li> <li>• Educate and outreach to community members who can play a significant role in eradicating human trafficking</li> <li>• Build strategic alliances with international human rights organizations</li> <li>• Provide vision for the work on trafficking</li> <li>• Identify human and monetary resources available directly to trafficking survivors</li> <li>• Identify needs and implement trainings for the different actors who work with trafficking survivors (e.g., social and legal service providers and law enforcement).</li> </ul>

I. Introduction

Human trafficking is an egregious violation of human rights. San Francisco is known to be one of the top destinations in California for human trafficking because of its ports and airports, rising immigrant population, and large industries that attract forced labor.

Survivors of trafficking have a number of unique needs, such as legal services, language education, job skills training, life skills training, trauma recovery services, and intensive case management.

Though many service providers throughout San Francisco and the Bay Area provide services to survivors of human trafficking, few agencies receive funding specific to their work with trafficked individuals. Thus, it is difficult to fully understand the true scope of the issue and the actual need in the community.

Mayor Gavin Newsom, District Attorney Kamala Harris, the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, City departments, and community providers are committed to eradicating human trafficking and providing supportive services to survivors.

The Directory of Services for Survivors of Human Trafficking, 2010 is a preliminary step toward a coordinated response to trafficking. By highlighting the work conducted on behalf of survivors throughout the region, future efforts related to prevention, service provisions, and enforcement can encompass and enhance the dedicated work already in place.

II. San Francisco Collaborative Against Human Trafficking

MISSION

San Francisco Collaborative Against Human Trafficking (SFC AHT) is committed to ending human trafficking through collaboration, education, outreach, advocacy, and supporting survivors of human trafficking by taking a zero tolerance stance on exploitation, violence, and human trafficking.

ABOUT SFC AHT

SFC AHT envisions a local and global community that fully comprehends the value of each human life and abhors any practice that denies a person her or his right to live a life free from violence, exploitation, or slavery. To ensure this vision becomes a reality for San Francisco and beyond, SFC AHT is committed to preventing human trafficking, prosecuting traffickers, and protecting survivors of human trafficking by building a strong collaborative of anti-trafficking advocates and experts in San Francisco.

SFC AHT launched in January 2010 with a membership of over 20 agencies representing a broad array of nongovernmental organizations, government agencies, law enforcement agencies, service providers, educators, and community members.

FIND OUT MORE

Currently, SFC AHT is jointly housed by the San Francisco Human Rights Commission and the Department on the Status of Women. Visit the Human Rights Commission website for details about the history of the Collaborative, events, and ways to get involved: <http://www.sf-hrc.org/index.aspx?page=58>.

III. Description of the Directory

The Directory of Services for Survivors of Human Trafficking, 2010 represents an important tool for community members, City departments, criminal justice agencies, community-based service providers, health care practitioners, and mental health providers, offering the means to make accurate and effective referrals to survivors.

The 2010 Directory focuses on services provided specifically for victims of human trafficking, including, women, girls, men, boys, and transgendered individuals. Local agencies engaging in advocacy, policy reform, and technical assistance have also been included, as have local and regional coalitions against human trafficking.

Although every effort has been made to include as many organizations that provide services to survivors of human trafficking as possible, the 2010 Directory is in its initial stages, and alterations are expected in future editions.

Please contact the Department on the Status of Women immediately with any modifications, additions, or deletions to the services listed by sending an email to dosw@sfgov.org or by calling (415) 252-2570.

“A central component underlying human trafficking is an attitude that demeans women and children, leading to the disproportionate abuse by traffickers of these population groups. The U.S. Department of State estimates that approximately 80 percent of victims trafficked from other countries are women and girls and up to 50 percent are minors. Clearly, gender inequality plays a major role in human trafficking.”
