Hi Anne

I am writing as a character reference for Jeff Potter. I am a teacher, a mother of three, a farmer and an artisan. I am a strong and opinionated woman. I have met and interacted with many people in my 61 years both in a work environment and socially. I am an observer and I consider myself to be a pretty good judge of character.

I had a booth with my knitted garments at the Marin Farmers Market for many years. Often times if I wasn't selling next to Jeff our booths were close by. I adored him. He is one of the kindest, big hearted people I have ever met. Everyone loved him. His customers came back week after week. His booth was always hopping. Jeff was always smiling and was always professional! The other crafts people all liked him as well. It would be impossible not to like Jeff! If you were struggling with your tent or needing to lift something heavy he would happily offer to help. Anyone who can make a living for as many years as he has, out in the cold and rain in the winter and the blazing hot sun or San Francisco fog in the summer has to be a talented artist and a strong individual and a truly good person who people want to return to buy from! Jeff is all of that. Seriously, of all of the artisans/crafts people I have ever worked around Jeff is probably in my top three.

Jeff is an honest, good person. If someone is accusing him otherwise then they are not.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Nicole Kure Hill
