Welcome to the Civic Center!

San Francisco’s National Historic District Civic Center is the product the reformist City Beautiful movement which was popular in American cities at the end of the 19th Century. The plan was to locate in grand public buildings around a plaza the important governmental functions as well as arts, educational and cultural institutions to instill civic pride and personal improvement.

San Francisco conceived of its grand Civic Center after the devastation of great Earthquake and Fire which had destroyed its City Hall. It was only when Congress designated it as the host city for the Panama Pacific International Exposition to be held in 1915 did work begin in earnest. The new City Hall was one of the first buildings completed on the Plaza. Others, including the War Memorial Opera house, were completed into the 1930s. These buildings comprise the largest assemblage of neoclassical public buildings in the country outside of Washington, DC.

While every other city in the country long ago abandoned the City Beautiful movement and its civic center plans, these ideas retain a life in modern San Francisco as witnessed by the new Court House and Main Library at the Plaza, and the conversion of the Old Main Library into the home of the Asian Arts Museum.

Visitor Information Center

What speaks 12 languages and always has the scoop on what’s happening in San Francisco? The answer is San Francisco’s Visitor Information Center, located on the lower level of Hallidie Plaza, next door to the cable car turntable at Powell and Market streets, 900 Market Street.

The VIC is open Monday through Friday 9am-5pm, Saturday, Sunday and holidays 9am-3pm, Pacific Standard Time. Telephone inquiries may be made from 8:30am to 5pm Pacific Standard Time, Monday through Friday by calling 415-391-2000 or 415-392-0328 (TDD).

Temporary art exhibits Mon. – Fri.
8:00am – 8:00pm in South Light Court and ground floor corridor.
Titles and content change regularly.

- City Hall was built in 1915 as a palace for the people. It is the crown jewel of one of the finest ensembles of classical American Architecture.
- The ornate dome resting atop the 500,000 square foot structure is one of the tallest in the U.S.
- There are ten acres of Tennessee pink marble and 50,000 blocks of limestone lining the walls and floors.
- There are approximately 2,000 weddings in City Hall a year. Marilyn Monroe and Joe DiMaggio were married here in 1954.
- In 1978, City Hall and the entire Civic Center was designated as a National Historic Landmark.
- In 1989, the Loma Prieta Earthquake severely damaged the building. San Francisco voters spent $300 million to restore the building.
- To protect against future earthquakes, an innovative base isolator system was installed below each support pillar. The entire building is now separated from the ground and can sway up to 27 inches in any direction as a unit.
- The South Light Court features a variety of interesting historical and community exhibits. The ground floor hosts a rotating exhibit operated by the San Francisco Arts Commission.

Possible Itinerary:

There are so many things to see and do in the civic center you can make a whole day of it!

Go to breakfast at one of the many cafes in the Hayes Valley Shopping District and do some window shopping while you’re there. Head over to City Hall for a tour of its beautiful rotunda and visit the public art gallery.

Cross the plaza to the Asian Art Museum and take in its incredible selection of artifacts. Visit the Main Library to browse around its fascinating rotating exhibitions; while you’re at it, you can check your email or go online for free!

Getting hungry? Walk over to Careme, the California Culinary Institute’s restaurant and witness the students’ and chefs’ magic first-hand. Now the afternoon is open for a tour of the SF Performing Arts Library Museum, or the Art Institute, or more shopping of course!

Dinner is easy, since there are all kinds of world class restaurants within walking distance. After dinner, you have an incredible selection of world class entertainment: music at the beautiful War Memorial Performing Arts Center, home of the Symphony, Opera, or Ballet; or local theater, girls chorus, rock concerts…you get the idea!
