She was then brought another drink that she did not order and said she blacked out waking up 4 hours later in the parking lot. The complainant called her daughter and she was able to somewhat explain what had occurred and told her to go back to the terminal and call the police. The complainant stated the officers were not investigating the incident as a possible rape/assault. The complainant was accused of impeding the investigation and the sergeant did not allow her daughter to obtain medical care because they were not done with their investigation. The complainant said the sergeant ignored her and instead was victim blaming, bullying, and influencing the officer to treat this case a drunk incident. The sergeant's casual approach prevented the proper test for rape/assault at the hospital. The officer told her that he would find video to disprove her theory that her daughter was drugged. An Asian officer grabbed the complainant and told her to stop yelling at the officer.
